

YINDI: THE LAST KOALA

1 x 60'

An emotional tear-jerker, the program follows the life of a most extraordinary koala.

On a straight-forward viewing level, this program is filled with superb shots of koalas in all their moods, cute and cuddly through to aggressive fighters.

On a deeper level, the film traces the national plight of the koala, an Australian icon that is facing a very real threat to its future survival.

There are some truly astonishing images, recorded over the period of 12-months by a series of film crews along Eastern Australia: Viewers are treated to an amazing hairless baby Yindi suckling its mother's teat in the pouch. There follows a car accident, which so injures the mother that a still-minute and hairless Yindi is thrown clear, and has to be hand reared. Never before has such a fascinating event been recorded on film.

NATURAL HISTORY